MATTER OF FACT SOFTWARE LAUNCH PLEXSPY VERSION 1 RELEASE 1

Today MATTER OF FACT SOFTWARE announce the launch of PlexSpy Application Status Monitor Version 1 Release 1.

The enhancements to PlexSpy delivered with Version 1.1 will make it even easier for people involved in supporting CICS applications to quickly identify the source of issues affecting the business systems for which they are responsible.

Worldwide, large businesses and organisations depend upon IBM mainframe technology running CICS to support their business critical systems and services. Maintaining and operating these systems optimally is essential as any downtime can be catastrophic for service.

Matter of Fact Software have, from long experience of supporting and managing such systems, noticed that there is room for improvement in the support processes used to manage these systems and services. PlexSpy Application Status Monitor was inspired by these experiences and designed to bring about the required improvements to the support processes.

By associating named business applications with the specific CICS infrastructure that underpins them, support staff are able to respond to service impacting incidents faster than ever before. With less time wasted in understanding the nature of problems, normal services will be resumed faster than previously possible.

In these challenging times, where budgets are under pressure and there are constant demands for the ICT department to 'do more with less', PlexSpy can play a part in helping to do just that. Using PlexSpy will allow less experienced support staff to play a bigger role in the support processes used to manage the IT infrastructure. This means that fewer calls will be made to the small group of technical specialists supporting CICS itself. At present most, if not all, operational issues will be referred to this group of people as its configuration can be complex and difficult to understand. Even they do not necessarily know what aspects of the system to investigate when named applications are said to be in trouble. PlexSpy will help them too.

PlexSpy is easy to use and provides specific answers to general questions. This makes it possible for the less technically experienced support staff to answer more of their own technical questions and so relieves the second level CICS support staff of that burden. At the click of a mouse button, the PlexSpy user will have instant real-time status information concerning the named application under investigation.

With its features and facilities and perspective on the application, PlexSpy is set to revolutionise the support processes surrounding mainframe CICS.

It is envisaged that PlexSpy will evolve over time to provide ever more useful functionality bringing further efficiencies and service improvements.
